

“Waging Peace in the Midst of the Occupation”

Sunday, June 22nd 7:00 P.M

First Presbyterian Church

7610 Newcastle Dr, Annandale, VA 22003

Daoud Nassar

Palestinian Christian Farmer

“Daoud Nassar, a Middle East peacemaker who has been working for years to ease the mistrust between Israelis and his own Palestinians. To date, the results have been small but not so small as to discourage this man of great drive and stout faith.”

-Ben White, Christian Science Monitor, December 27, 2007

“The most effective way to reach peace,” Mr. Nassar explained to a group of high school students I teach in Washington, “is meeting people face-to-face. It’s possible to resolve grievances in a nonviolent way.”

It’s no exaggeration to say that such a notion is the magnet that pulled together the Olmert-Abbas meeting. Nor is it too much to argue that if the Israeli government, habitual in violating human rights, is sincere in its claims to want peace, then one place to start is the Tent of Nations and the Nassar family land.

-Colman McCarthy, National Catholic Reporter, May 2, 2008

Don’t miss this rare opportunity to meet and dialogue with a peacemaking Palestinian olive farmer. Join us with Daoud and his wife Jihan who will share their stories of “People Building Bridges,” through their project, Tent of Nations. Donations are welcome through Fotonna.org.
